The program offers students the opportunity to advance their studies, exchange knowledge with professors and local students, gain international experience, and visit a country with many tourist attractions and exquisite cuisine. Lima has a population of over 8 million people and welcomes visitors from all over the world. Academics & Program

Universidad San Ignacio de Loyola in Lima

Students may enroll in any of the nearly 30 academic programs offered on the Lima campus, which may include courses in subjects such as Hospitality/Tourism Management, Marketing, Business, Economics, International Business, International Relations, Communications, Culinary Arts and more. Classes may be taken in Spanish or English from March through July and from August through December.

Each course is 2-4 USIL credits, and students enroll in up to 20 USIL credits per semester. The program offers Spanish language courses at beginner intermediate and advanced. Likewise, students enroll in coursework taught in English or select regular university courses taught in Spanish, assuming they possess an Intermediate/Advanced level of Spanish language proficiency. Class sizes are small, which provides more individualized attention, and the mix of local Peruvian students with international students coming from all over the world makes for a dynamic learning environment.

Student Life & Housing

Student Life

Students will become part of a vibrant international student community, with a host of international student and university programs available to them. USIL has a Sports Department which is in charge of organizing, developing and supervising sports and recreational activities in the university. It promotes the participation of students in such team sports as basketball, football, “futsal”, swimming, volleyball, athletics, chess, bowling, judo, jiu jitsu, tae kwon do and modern dance.

Students participate in these intramural activities, as well as external competitions and league competitions organized by the Liga Metropolitana de Futsal, Liga Mixta de Basquetbol and Liga de Voleibol de La Molina. Apart from the activities organized by the university, each department organizes different events that promote the participation of its students and contribute to their personal and professional development. Among these activities, you can enjoy the Día de la Facultad (The “Department’s” Day), an event that brings together students and graduates of each of the programs to fraternize and participate in sports and fun activities. There are also talks, seminars, presentations, conferences, trips, and other activities. Volunteer opportunities are also available to dedicated students interested in providing service to their local community.

Housing

Students will have the opportunity to immerse themselves in Peruvian culture by residing with local host families. Students will be provided a furnished, private bedroom along with three daily meals, laundry/ironing and access to Wi-Fi. After completing a housing profile, students will be paired with a family located in a neighborhood with easy access to the university via public transportation. All host families receive an orientation and information regarding their students prior to their arrival, and 24-hour support is available to students during their stay with the family.
